

Sixty-eighth session

Agenda item 17 (c)

Macroeconomic policy questions: external debt sustainability and development*Report of the Second Committee*Rapporteur:* Ms. Juliet Hay (New Zealand)I. Introduction

1. The Second Committee held a substantive debate on agenda item 17 (see A/68/436, para. 2). Action on sub-item (c) was taken at the 32nd and 41st meetings, on 6 November and 11 December 2013. An account of the Committee's consideration of the sub-item is contained in the relevant summary records (A/C.2/68/SR.32 and 41).

II. Consideration of draft resolutions A/C.2/68/L.15 and
A/C.2/68/L.70

2. At the 32nd meeting, on 6 November, the representative of Fiji, on behalf of the States Members of the United Nations that are members of the Group of 77 and China, introduced a draft resolution entitled "External debt sustainability and development" (A/C.2/68/L.15), which read:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolutions 58/203 of 23 December 2003, 59/223 of 22 December 2004, 60/187 of 22 December 2005, 61/188 of 20 December 2006, 62/186 of 19 December 2007, 63/206 of 19 December 2008, 64/191 of 21 December 2009, 65/144 of 20 December 2010, 66/189 of 22 December 2011 and 67/198 of 21 December 2012,

* The report of the Committee on this item is being issued in five parts, under the symbol A/68/436 and Add.1-4.

“Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration, adopted on 8 September 2000, and the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals and its outcome document,

“Recalling further its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

“Recalling the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

“Recalling also its resolution 60/265 of 30 June 2006 on the follow-up to the development outcome of the 2005 World Summit, including the Millennium Development Goals and the other internationally agreed development goals,

“Recalling further the International Conference on Financing for Development and its outcome document and the Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development to Review the Implementation of the Monterrey Consensus and its outcome document, the Doha Declaration on Financing for Development,

“Recalling the Conference on the World Financial and Economic Crisis and Its Impact on Development and its outcome document, “Recalling also the Fourth United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries and the Istanbul Declaration and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2011-2020,

“Recalling further the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 20 to 22 June 2012, and its outcome document, entitled ‘The future we want’,

“Recalling the special event to follow up efforts made towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals, held on 25 September 2013, and its outcome document,

“Welcoming the thematic debate in the General Assembly on the role of credit-rating agencies in the international financial system, held on 10 September 2013, and emphasizing the need to continue further discussions on this issue,

“Welcoming also the special meeting of the Economic and Social Council on external debt sustainability and development, which focused on lessons learned from debt crises and the ongoing work on sovereign debt restructuring and debt resolution mechanisms, and emphasizing the need to continue discussions on these issues,

“Emphasizing that debt sustainability is essential for underpinning growth, underlining the importance of debt sustainability and effective debt management to the efforts to achieve national and international development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and acknowledging that debt crises are costly and disruptive, including for employment and productive investment, and tend to be followed by cuts in public spending, including on health and education, affecting in particular the poor and vulnerable,

“Recognizing that the world is still suffering the consequences of the worst global financial and economic crisis since the establishment of the United Nations, that there is an urgent need to prevent the repetition of such crises in the future and that the macroeconomic situation of developing countries will substantially contribute to greater stability and resilience in the global economy,

“Reaffirming that each country has primary responsibility for its own development and that the role of national policies and development strategies, including in the area of debt management, cannot be overemphasized for the achievement of sustainable development, and recognizing that national efforts, including to achieve development goals and to maintain debt sustainability, should be complemented by supportive global programmes, measures and policies aimed at expanding the development opportunities of developing countries, while taking into account national conditions and ensuring respect for national ownership, strategies and sovereignty,

“Reaffirming also the crucial importance of assisting countries in achieving and maintaining debt sustainability and that multilateral institutions, including entities within the United Nations system and other relevant organizations, have a central role to play in such assistance while fulfilling their respective mandates to provide continuous support to developing countries’ efforts to overcome the development gap,

“Reiterating that debt sustainability depends on a confluence of many factors at the international and national levels, and emphasizing that country-specific circumstances and the impact of external shocks, such as those derived from the world financial and economic crisis, should continue to be taken into account in debt sustainability analyses,

“Expressing deep concern about the adverse impacts, particularly on development, of the ongoing world financial and economic crisis, which has highlighted long-standing systemic fragilities and inequalities, stressing that the recovery is being threatened by, among other things, the deepening and widespread fiscal strains in the economies of developed countries and that the systemic problems facing the global economy have to be resolved, including through the full accomplishment of the reform of the global financial system and architecture, recognizing that any deepening of the current crisis will have a negative effect on debt sustainability globally, and confirming that unsustainable debt is a global problem,

“Recognizing that any deepening of the ongoing adverse impacts of the world financial and economic crisis threatens debt sustainability and development in developing countries and that the crisis has compromised the process of achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, that it threatens debt sustainability in many countries, especially developing countries, through, inter alia, its negative impact on the real economy and government revenue, and that it has forced many countries to increase borrowing to be able to mitigate the consequences of the crisis,

“Recognizing also the importance of efforts and cooperation undertaken at the national, regional and multilateral levels in response to the challenges posed by the world financial and economic crisis, and emphasizing the need to continue these efforts in a coherent and coordinated manner,

“Recognizing further the important role, on a case-by-case basis, of debt relief, including debt cancellation and debt restructuring, as debt crisis prevention and management tools for mitigating the impact of the world financial and economic crisis on developing countries,

“Emphasizing that official development assistance can also help countries to weather the negative effects of the global financial and economic crisis on trade, investment, debt servicing, remittances, exchange rate volatility and capital flows, and thus encouraging donor countries to uphold their international aid commitments, as official development assistance constitutes an important source of financing for developing countries to pursue the objectives outlined under the Millennium Development Goals and other internationally agreed development goals,

“Recognizing the role of private capital flows in mobilizing financing for development, stressing the challenges posed by excessive short-term capital inflows to many developing countries, including to their debt sustainability, and the need for policy space for the adoption of macroprudential and capital control measures to mitigate the impact of volatile capital flows, and encouraging further review of the benefits and disadvantages of such macroprudential measures,

“Expressing concern that many low- and middle-income countries face challenges in servicing their debt,

“Expressing deep concern that, in spite of international efforts, many least developed countries struggle with high debt burdens and are classified, in accordance with the debt sustainability assessments, as being in debt distress or at high risk of debt distress,

“Noting with appreciation that the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative and bilateral donors have provided substantial debt relief to 35 countries that have reached the completion point under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, which has provided needed debt relief and reallocated resources to investments in social services, while expressing concern that some post-completion point countries remain classified as being at high risk of debt distress and need to avoid rebuilding unsustainable debt burdens,

“Convinced that enhanced market access for goods and services of export interest to developing countries contributes significantly to debt sustainability in those countries,

“1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

“2. Emphasizes the special importance of a timely, effective, comprehensive and durable solution to the debt problems of developing countries to promote their economic growth and development;

“3. Stresses the importance of responsible lending and borrowing, emphasizes that creditors and debtors must share responsibility for preventing unsustainable debt situations, notes the endorsement by some Member States of the principles to promote responsible sovereign lending and borrowing, and encourages all Member States and stakeholders to continue to support the momentum gained under this initiative, inter alia, within the framework of the initiative of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development to promote responsible sovereign lending and borrowing;

“4. Acknowledges the role played by the Debt Sustainability Framework for Low-Income Countries, jointly developed by the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, to guide borrowing and lending decisions, and encourages the continued periodic review of the Framework in an open and transparent manner and with the full engagement of borrower Governments;

“5. Reiterates that no single indicator should be used to make definitive judgements about a country’s debt sustainability, and in this regard, while acknowledging the need to use transparent and comparable indicators, invites the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, in their assessment of debt sustainability, to continue to take into account a country’s structural weaknesses and the fundamental changes caused by, inter alia, natural disasters, conflicts and changes in global growth prospects or in the terms of trade, especially for commodity-dependent developing countries, as well as by the impact of developments on financial markets, using the appropriate frameworks;

“6. Recognizes that the long-term sustainability of debt depends on, inter alia, economic growth, the mobilization of domestic and international resources, export prospects of debtor countries, responsible debt management, sound macroeconomic policies that also support job creation, transparent and effective regulatory frameworks and success in overcoming structural development problems, and hence on the creation of international conditions that are conducive to development;

“7. Expresses concern regarding the persistence, enormity and multidimensional nature of the world financial and economic crisis, which caused a sharp deterioration of the debt ratios in several developing countries, stresses the need to continue to assist developing countries in avoiding a build-up of unsustainable debt so as to reduce the risk of relapsing into another debt crisis, notes in this regard the additional resources made available during and since the crisis through the International Monetary Fund and the multilateral development banks, calls for the continued provision of concessional and grant-based financing to low-income countries to enable them to respond to the consequences of the crisis, and notes the provision by the International Monetary Fund of interest relief to low-income countries in the form of zero-interest payments on financing from concessional lending facilities until the end of 2014;

“8. Emphasizes the need for coordinated policies aimed at fostering debt financing, debt relief and debt restructuring, recalls in this regard the improvement of the lending framework of the International Monetary Fund through, inter alia, streamlined conditions and the creation of more flexible instruments, such as a precautionary and liquidity line, while noting that new and ongoing programmes should not contain unwarranted procyclical conditionalities, and urges the multilateral development banks to continue to move forward on flexible, concessional, fast-disbursing and front-loaded assistance that will substantially and quickly assist developing countries facing financing gaps in their efforts to achieve the Millennium Development Goals, taking into consideration the individual absorptive capacities and debt sustainability of those countries;

“9. Notes that countries can seek to negotiate, as a last resort, on a case-by-case basis and through existing frameworks, agreements on temporary debt standstills between debtors and creditors in order to help mitigate the adverse impacts of the crisis and stabilize macroeconomic developments;

“10. Also notes the progress made under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative and the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative, while expressing concern that some countries have yet to reach decision or completion points, calls for the full and timely implementation of those Initiatives and for continued support to the remaining eligible countries in completing the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative process, and encourages all parties, both creditors and debtors, to fulfil their commitments as rapidly as possible in order to complete the debt relief process;

“11. Welcomes and encourages the efforts of the formerly heavily indebted poor countries, calls upon them to continue to strengthen their national policies to promote economic growth and poverty eradication, and invites the international financing institutions and the donor community to continue to provide adequate and sufficiently concessional financing to these countries;

“12. Encourages the international financial institutions to review the implementation and the impact of debt relief initiatives to better understand why some countries still face persisting debt problems after completion of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, calls for creditors and debtors to work together, and also calls for the design of strategies to address such problems;

“13. Underlines the fact that heavily indebted poor countries eligible for debt relief will not be able to enjoy its full benefits unless all creditors, both public and private, contribute their fair share and become involved in the international debt resolution mechanisms to ensure the debt sustainability of those countries, and invites creditors, both private and public, that are not yet fully participating in debt relief initiatives to substantially increase their participation, including through providing comparable treatment to the extent possible to debtor countries that have concluded sustainable debt relief agreements with creditors;

“14. Stresses that debt relief, in general, can play a key role in liberating resources that should be directed towards activities consistent with poverty eradication, sustained economic growth, economic development and the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and in this regard urges countries to direct the resources freed through debt relief, in particular through debt cancellation and reduction, towards achieving those objectives, including in the context of the development agenda beyond 2015, according to their national priorities and strategies;

“15. Encourages donor countries to take steps to ensure that resources provided for debt relief under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative and the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative do not detract from official development assistance commitments to be delivered to developing countries;

“16. Notes with concern that some low- and middle-income developing countries that are not part of the existing debt relief initiatives have large debt burdens that may create constraints on mobilizing the resources needed to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, indicating a need to design debt relief initiatives for those countries, and encourages the consideration of medium- and long-term sustainability as well as new approaches to deal with bilateral and private non-Paris Club debt;

“17. Encourages the Paris Club, in dealing with the debt of low- and middle-income debtor countries that are not part of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, to take into account their medium-term debt sustainability in addition to their financing gaps, and notes with appreciation the Evian approach of the Paris Club in providing different terms of debt relief in order to respond to the specific needs of debtor countries while preserving debt cancellation for heavily indebted poor countries;

“18. Recognizes the threats posed by vulture fund litigation and that some debtor countries may experience difficulties in obtaining comparable treatment from non-Paris Club creditors, as required by the standard clause included in Paris Club agreements, and calls for the continued provision by the relevant institutions of mechanisms and legal assistance to debtor countries to solve litigation issues;

“19. Stresses the need for the international community to remain vigilant in monitoring the debt situation of the least developed countries and to continue to take effective measures, preferably within existing frameworks, when applicable, to address the debt problem of those countries, including through the cancellation of the multilateral and bilateral debt owed by least developed countries to creditors, both public and private;

“20. Welcomes the efforts of and calls upon the international community to continue to provide flexibility, and stresses the need to sustain those efforts in helping post-conflict developing countries, especially those that are heavily indebted and poor, to achieve initial reconstruction for economic and social development;

“21. Also welcomes the efforts of and invites creditors to provide flexibility to developing countries affected by natural disasters so as to allow them to address their debt concerns, while taking into account their specific situations and needs;

“22. Calls for the consideration of additional measures and initiatives aimed at ensuring long-term debt sustainability through increased grant-based and other forms of concessional financing, the cancellation of 100 per cent of the eligible official multilateral and bilateral debt of heavily indebted poor countries and, where appropriate and on a case-by-case basis, significant debt relief or restructuring for developing countries with an unsustainable debt burden that are not part of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative;

“23. Invites donor countries, taking into account country-specific debt sustainability analyses, to continue their efforts to increase bilateral grants to developing countries, which could contribute to debt sustainability in the medium to long term, and recognizes the need for countries to be able to promote employment and productive investment and to invest in, inter alia, health and education while maintaining debt sustainability;

“24. Calls for the intensification of efforts to prevent and mitigate the prevalence and cost of debt crises by enhancing international financial mechanisms for crisis prevention and resolution, encourages the public and private sectors to cooperate in this regard, and invites creditors and debtors to further explore the use of new and improved debt instruments and innovative mechanisms such as debt swaps, including debt for equity in Millennium Development Goal projects, as well as debt indexation instruments;

“25. Also calls for the consideration of enhanced approaches to sovereign debt restructuring and debt resolution mechanisms, based on existing frameworks and principles, with the broad participation of creditors, including the international financial institutions, and debtors, and for the comparable treatment of all creditors, and in this regard calls upon all countries to promote and contribute to the discussions, within the United Nations and other appropriate forums, on the need for and feasibility of a more structured framework for international cooperation in this area;

“26. Calls for the establishment of a General Assembly working group to continue, with the participation of all relevant stakeholders within the United Nations system, the study and examination of options for enhanced approaches to debt restructuring and resolution mechanisms that take into account the multiple dimensions of debt sustainability, including its contribution to enhancing the development potential of developing countries as well as the stability and resilience of the global economy, and requests the United Nations system to continue its work in this regard;

“27. Invites the Economic and Social Council to hold a one-day meeting in 2014, in conjunction with its special high-level meeting with the international financial institutions, the World Trade Organization and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, to consider lessons learned from debt crises and the ongoing work on sovereign debt restructuring and debt resolution mechanisms, with the participation of all relevant stakeholders, and also invites the President of the Council to prepare a summary of the meeting;

“28. Notes the changing composition of the sovereign debt of some countries, which has shifted increasingly from official to commercial borrowing and from external to national public debt, although for most low-income countries external finance is still largely official, also notes that the levels of national debt and the significantly increased number of creditors, both official and private, could create other challenges for macroeconomic management and public debt sustainability, and stresses the need to address the implications of these changes, including through improved data collection and analysis;

“29. Stresses the need to increase information-sharing, transparency and the use of objective criteria in the construction and evaluation of debt scenarios, including an assessment of national public and private debt, in order to ensure the achievement of development goals, and encourages further improvement of the mutual exchange of information, on a voluntary basis, on borrowing and lending among all creditors and borrowers;

“30. Reaffirms the importance of having access to credit-rating information and of a reduction in transaction costs, while taking into account that mistakes, biased forecasts and mechanistic reliance on the ratings of credit-rating agencies have the potential to cause or exacerbate financial crises, rendering the international financial system more vulnerable to cliff effects, and in this regard reiterates the importance of reducing the mechanistic reliance on the ratings of credit-rating agencies and encourages further transparency and competition among these agencies, including through the generation of national capacities and mechanisms;

“31. Recognizes that credit-rating agencies play a significant role in the provision of information, including the assessment of corporate and sovereign risks, calls for a more transparent international credit-rating system that takes fully into account the needs of developing countries, emphasizes that greater competition among credit-rating agencies, including the generation of national capacities and mechanisms, would improve the flow of information among creditors and debtors, acknowledges the changing nature of the credit-rating regime, and in this regard invites the President of the General Assembly to convene another thematic debate on the role of credit-rating agencies in the international financial system and requests the Secretary-General to report on new and ongoing measures to establish new or to improve existing credit-rating agencies and on their capacity to assess accurately the creditworthiness of borrowers, as well as policies and measures that would reduce spillover and contagion effects;

“32. Invites the international community to continue efforts to increase support, including financial and technical assistance, for institutional capacity-building in developing countries to enhance sustainable debt management as an integral part of national development strategies, including by promoting transparent and accountable debt management systems and negotiation and renegotiation capacities and through supporting legal advice in relation to tackling external debt litigation and debt data reconciliation between creditors and debtors so that debt sustainability may be achieved and maintained;

“33. Invites the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, in cooperation with the regional commissions, regional development banks and other relevant multilateral financial institutions and stakeholders, to continue and intensify cooperation in respect of capacity-building activities in developing countries in the area of debt management and debt sustainability;

“34. Acknowledges that timely and comprehensive data on the level and composition of debt are necessary for, inter alia, building early warning systems aimed at limiting the impact of debt crises, calls for debtor and creditor countries to intensify their efforts to collect data, and calls for donors to consider increasing their support for technical cooperation programmes aimed at increasing the statistical capacity of developing countries in that regard;

“35. Calls upon all Member States and the United Nations system to take appropriate measures and actions for the implementation of the commitments, agreements and decisions of the major United Nations conferences and summits, in particular those related to the question of the external debt sustainability of developing countries;

“36. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution and to include in the report a comprehensive and substantive analysis of the external debt situation of developing countries and, as an annex, the summary of the one-day meeting organized by the Economic and Social Council;

“37. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-ninth session, under the item entitled ‘Macroeconomic policy questions’, the sub-item entitled ‘External debt sustainability and development’.”

3. At its 41st meeting, on 11 December, the Committee had before it a draft resolution entitled “External debt sustainability and development” (A/C.2/68/L.70), submitted by the Vice-Chair of the Committee, Ms. Farrah Brown (Jamaica), on the basis of informal consultations held on draft resolution A/C.2/68/L.15.
4. At the same meeting, the Secretary of the Committee read out a statement of the programme budget implications of draft resolution A/C.2/68/L.70 (see A/C.2/68/SR.41).
5. Also at the same meeting, the Committee adopted draft resolution A/C.2/68/L.70 (see para. 7).
6. In the light of the adoption of draft resolution A/C.2/68/L.70, draft resolution A/C.2/68/L.15 was withdrawn by its sponsors.

III. Recommendation of the Second Committee

7. The Second Committee recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

Recalling further the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 20 to 22 June 2012, and its outcome document, entitled “The future we want”,⁸

Recalling the special event to follow up efforts made towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals, held on 25 September 2013, and its outcome document,⁹

Noting the thematic debate in the General Assembly on the role of credit-rating agencies in the international financial system, held on 10 September 2013, and the ongoing discussions on these issues,

Noting also the special meeting of the Economic and Social Council on external debt sustainability and development, held on 23 April 2013, which considered lessons learned from debt crises and the ongoing work on sovereign debt restructuring and debt resolution mechanisms, and the ongoing discussions on these issues,

Emphasizing that debt sustainability is essential for underpinning growth, underlining the importance of debt sustainability and effective debt management to the efforts to achieve national and international development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and acknowledging that debt crises are costly and disruptive, including for employment and productive investment, and tend to be followed by cuts in public spending, including on health and education, affecting in particular the poor and vulnerable,

Reaffirming that each country has primary responsibility for its own development and that the role of national policies and development strategies, including in the area of debt management, cannot be overemphasized for the achievement of sustainable development, and recognizing that national efforts, including to achieve development goals and to maintain debt sustainability, should be complemented by supportive global programmes, measures and policies aimed at expanding the development opportunities of developing countries, while taking into account national conditions and ensuring respect for national ownership, strategies and sovereignty,

Reaffirming also that multilateral institutions, including entities within the United Nations system and other relevant organizations, should continue to play an important role, given their respective mandates, in assisting countries in achieving and maintaining debt sustainability,

Reiterating that debt sustainability depends on a confluence of many factors at the international and national levels, and emphasizing that country-specific circumstances and the impact of external shocks, such as those derived from the world financial and economic crisis, should continue to be taken into account in debt sustainability analyses,

Expressing deep concern about the ongoing adverse impacts, particularly on development, of the world financial and economic crisis, recognizing evidence of an uneven and fragile recovery, cognizant that the global economy, notwithstanding significant efforts that helped to contain tail risks, improve financial market conditions and sustain recovery, still remains in a challenging phase with downside risks, including high volatility in global markets, high unemployment, particularly among young people, indebtedness in some countries and widespread fiscal strains, which pose challenges for global economic recovery and reflect the need for additional progress towards sustaining and rebalancing global demand, and stressing the need for continuing efforts to address systemic fragilities and imbalances and to reform and strengthen the international financial system, while implementing the reforms agreed to date,

Recognizing that the ongoing adverse impacts of the world financial and economic crisis entail the possibility of undermining the progress made towards achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and threaten debt sustainability in many countries, especially developing countries, through, inter alia, the consequences on the real economy and government revenue and the need to increase borrowing to mitigate the negative impact of the crisis,

Recognizing also the importance of efforts and cooperation undertaken at the national, regional and international levels in response to the challenges posed by the world financial and economic crisis, and emphasizing the need to continue these efforts in a coherent and coordinated manner,

Recognizing further the important role, on a case-by-case basis, of debt relief, including debt cancellation, as appropriate, and debt restructuring as debt crisis prevention and management tools for mitigating the impact of the world financial and economic crisis on developing countries,

Recognizing the role of private capital flows in mobilizing financing for development, stressing the challenges posed by excessive short-term capital inflows to many developing countries, including to their debt sustainability, and encouraging further review of the benefits and disadvantages of the macroprudential measures available to mitigate the impact of volatile capital flows,

Expressing concern that a number of low- and middle-income countries face challenges in servicing their debt,

Expressing deep concern that, in spite of international efforts, many least developed countries struggle with high debt burdens and are classified, in accordance with the debt sustainability assessments, as being in debt distress or at high risk of debt distress,

Noting with appreciation that the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, facilitated by the Paris Club, the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative and bilateral donors have provided substantial debt relief to 35 countries that have reached the completion point under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, which has provided needed debt relief and facilitated the reallocation of resources to investments in social services, while expressing concern that some post-completion point countries remain classified as being at high risk of debt distress and need to avoid rebuilding unsustainable debt burdens,

Convinced that enhanced market access for goods and services of export interest to developing countries contributes significantly to debt sustainability in those countries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;¹⁰
2. Emphasizes the special importance of a timely, effective, comprehensive and durable solution to the debt problems of developing countries to promote their economic growth and development;
3. Stresses the importance of sustainable lending and borrowing, emphasizes that creditors and debtors must share responsibility for preventing unsustainable debt situations and incorporate debt sustainability considerations into their financing decisions, notes the endorsement by some Member States of the principles of the initiative of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development to promote responsible sovereign lending and borrowing, and encourages Member States and relevant stakeholders to continue the ongoing discussions on this issue;
4. Acknowledges the role played by the Debt Sustainability Framework for Low-Income Countries, jointly developed by the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, to guide borrowing and lending decisions, and encourages the continued periodic review of the Framework in an open and transparent manner and with the full engagement of borrower and creditor Governments;
5. Reiterates that no single indicator should be used to make definitive judgements about a country's debt sustainability, and in this regard, while acknowledging the need to use transparent and comparable indicators, invites the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, in their assessment of debt sustainability, to continue to take into account a country's structural weaknesses and the fundamental changes caused by, inter alia, natural disasters, conflicts and changes in global growth prospects or in the terms of trade, especially for commodity-dependent developing countries, as well as by the impact of developments on financial markets, and to provide information on this issue to Member States, using the appropriate frameworks;
6. Recognizes that the long-term sustainability of debt depends on, inter alia, economic growth, the mobilization of domestic and international resources, export prospects of debtor countries, sustainable debt management, sound macroeconomic policies that also support job creation, transparent and effective regulatory frameworks and success in overcoming structural development problems, and hence on the creation of an enabling international environment that is conducive to development;
7. Also recognizes the enormity and multidimensional nature of the world financial and economic crisis, which caused a sharp deterioration of the debt ratios in several developing countries, stresses the need to continue to assist developing countries in avoiding a build-up of unsustainable debt so as to reduce the risk of relapsing into another debt crisis, notes in this regard the additional resources made available during and since the crisis through the International Monetary Fund and the multilateral development banks, calls for the continued provision of concessional and grant-based financing to low-income countries to enable them to respond to the consequences of the crisis, and notes the provision by the International Monetary Fund of interest relief to low-income countries in the form of zero-interest payments on financing from concessional lending facilities until the end of 2014;

8. Further recognizes the roles of the United Nations and the international financial institutions in accordance with their respective mandates, and encourages them to continue to support global efforts towards sustained, inclusive and equitable growth, sustainable development and the external debt sustainability of developing countries, including through continued monitoring of global financial flows and their implications in this regard;

9. Emphasizes the need for coordinated policies aimed at fostering debt financing, debt relief and debt restructuring, recalls in this regard the improvement of the lending framework of the International Monetary Fund through, inter alia, streamlined conditions and flexible instruments, such as a precautionary and liquidity line, flexible credit line and rapid financing instrument, while noting that new and ongoing programmes should not contain unwarranted procyclical conditionalities, and urges the multilateral development banks to continue to move forward on flexible, concessional, fast-disbursing and front-loaded assistance that will substantially and quickly assist developing countries facing financing gaps in their efforts to achieve the Millennium Development Goals, taking into consideration the individual absorptive capacities and debt sustainability of those countries;

10. Notes that countries can seek to negotiate, as a last resort, on a case-by-case basis and through existing frameworks, agreements on temporary debt standstills between debtors and creditors in order to help mitigate the adverse impacts of the crisis and stabilize macroeconomic developments;

11. Also notes the progress made under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, facilitated by the Paris Club, and the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative, while expressing concern that some countries have yet to reach decision or completion points, calls for the full and timely implementation of those Initiatives and for continued support to the remaining eligible countries in completing the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, and encourages all parties, both creditors and debtors, to fulfil their commitments as rapidly as possible in order to complete the debt relief process;

12. Welcomes and encourages the efforts of the heavily indebted poor countries, calls upon them to continue to strengthen their national policies to promote economic growth and poverty eradication through, inter alia, the maintenance of a national environment conducive to private-sector development, a stable macroeconomic framework and transparent and accountable systems of public finance, and invites the international financing institutions and the donor community to continue to provide adequate and sufficiently concessional financing to those countries;

13. Encourages the international financial institutions to review the implementation and the impact of debt relief initiatives to better understand why some countries still face persisting debt problems after completion of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, and calls for creditors and debtors to work together, inter alia, through the design of responses, including the broader use of debt management, to address them;

14. Underlines the fact that heavily indebted poor countries eligible for debt relief will not be able to enjoy its full benefits unless all creditors, both public and private, contribute their fair share and become involved in the international debt resolution mechanisms to ensure the debt sustainability of those countries, and invites creditors, both private and public, that are not yet fully participating in debt relief initiatives to substantially increase their participation, including through providing comparable treatment to the extent possible to debtor countries that have concluded sustainable debt relief agreements with creditors;

15. Stresses that debt relief can play a key role in liberating resources that should be directed towards activities consistent with poverty eradication, sustained economic growth, economic development and the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and in this regard urges countries to direct the resources freed through debt relief, in particular through debt cancellation and reduction, towards achieving those objectives, including in the context of the post-2015 development agenda, according to their national priorities and strategies;

16. Encourages donor countries to take steps to ensure that resources provided for debt relief under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative and the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative do not detract from other resources to be available for developing countries in accordance with official development assistance commitments;

17. Notes with concern that some low- and middle-income developing countries that are not part of the existing debt relief initiatives have large debt burdens that may create constraints on mobilizing the resources needed to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, indicating a need to consider, as appropriate, stronger debt management and debt relief initiatives for those countries, and encourages the consideration of medium- and long-term sustainability as well as new approaches to deal with bilateral and private non-Paris Club debt;

18. Encourages the Paris Club, in dealing with the debt of low- and middle-income debtor countries that are not part of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, to take into account their medium-term debt sustainability in addition to their financing gaps, and notes with appreciation the Evian approach of the Paris Club in providing different terms of debt relief in order to respond to the specific needs of debtor countries while preserving debt cancellation for heavily indebted poor countries;

19. Recognizes the concerns about vulture fund litigation and that some debtor countries may experience difficulties in obtaining comparable treatment from non-Paris Club creditors, as required by the standard clause included in Paris Club agreements, and calls for the continued provision by the relevant institutions of mechanisms and legal assistance to debtor countries to solve litigation issues;

20. Stresses the need for the international community to remain vigilant in monitoring the debt situation of the least developed countries and to continue to take effective measures, preferably within existing frameworks, when applicable, to address the debt problem of those countries, including through the cancellation of the multilateral and bilateral debt owed by least developed countries to creditors, both public and private;

21. Welcomes the efforts of and calls upon the international community to continue to provide flexibility, and stresses the need to sustain those efforts in helping post-conflict developing countries, especially those that are heavily indebted and poor, to achieve initial reconstruction for economic and social development;

22. Also welcomes the efforts of and invites creditors to provide flexibility to developing countries affected by natural disasters so as to allow them to address their debt concerns, while taking into account their specific situations and needs;

23. Calls for the consideration of additional measures and initiatives aimed at ensuring long-term debt sustainability through increased grant-based and other forms of concessional financing, the cancellation of 100 per cent of the eligible official multilateral and bilateral debt of heavily indebted poor countries and, where appropriate and on a case-by-case basis, significant debt relief or restructuring for developing countries with an unsustainable debt burden that are not part of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative;

24. Invites donor countries, taking into account country-specific debt sustainability analyses, to continue their efforts to increase bilateral grants to developing countries, which could contribute to debt sustainability in the medium to long term, and recognizes the need for countries to be able to promote employment and productive investment and to invest in, inter alia, health and education while maintaining debt sustainability;

25. Calls for the intensification of efforts to prevent and mitigate the prevalence and cost of debt crises by enhancing international financial mechanisms for crisis prevention and resolution, encourages the private sector to cooperate in this regard, and invites creditors and debtors to further explore, where appropriate and on a mutually agreed, transparent and case-by-case basis, the use of new and improved debt instruments and innovative mechanisms such as debt swaps, including debt for equity in Millennium Development Goal projects, as well as debt indexation instruments;

26. Also calls for the consideration of enhanced approaches to sovereign debt restructuring and debt resolution mechanisms, based on existing frameworks and principles, with the broad participation of creditors and debtors, and for the comparable treatment of all creditors and an important role for the Bretton Woods institutions and other relevant organizations within the United Nations system, and in this regard calls upon all countries to promote and contribute to the discussions, within the United Nations and other appropriate forums, on the need for and feasibility of a more structured framework for international cooperation in this area;

27. Decides to convene, at its sixty-ninth session, a special joint meeting of the Second Committee of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council to consider lessons learned from debt crises and the ongoing work on sovereign debt restructuring and debt resolution mechanisms, with the participation of relevant stakeholders, as appropriate, building on the report prepared by the Secretary-General, and resulting in a summary of the meeting;

28. Notes the changing composition of the sovereign debt of some countries, which has shifted increasingly from official to commercial borrowing and from external to national public debt, although for most low-income countries external finance is still largely official, also notes that the levels of national debt and the

significantly increased number of creditors, both official and private, could create other challenges for macroeconomic management and public debt sustainability, and stresses the need to address the implications of these changes, including through improved data collection and analysis and enhancing international efforts in support of building the debt management capacity in borrowing countries, at their request;

29. Stresses the need to increase information-sharing, transparency and the use of objective criteria in the construction and evaluation of debt scenarios, including an assessment of national public and private debt, in order to ensure the achievement of development goals, and encourages further improvement of the mutual exchange of information, on a voluntary basis, on borrowing and lending among all creditors and borrowers;

30. Reaffirms the importance of having access to credit-rating information, and of the reduction of transaction costs, taking into account that inaccurate forecasts render the international financial system more vulnerable to herd behaviour and cliff effects, which have the potential to exacerbate financial crises, and in this regard encourages greater transparency, independence, avoidance of conflicts of interest and competition among credit-rating agencies, including through the development of national capacities and mechanisms, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to report on this issue when preparing his report on the implementation of the present resolution;

31. Invites, in this regard, the President of the Economic and Social Council to give appropriate consideration to this issue by organizing a meeting during the regular programme of work of the next substantive session of the Council;

32. Invites the international community to continue efforts to increase support, including financial and technical assistance, for institutional capacity-building in developing countries to enhance sustainable debt management as an integral part of national development strategies, including by promoting transparent and accountable debt management systems and negotiation and renegotiation capacities and through supporting legal advice in relation to tackling external debt litigation and debt data reconciliation between creditors and debtors so that debt sustainability may be achieved and maintained;

33. Invites the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, in cooperation with the regional commissions, regional development banks and other relevant multilateral financial institutions and stakeholders, to continue and intensify cooperation in respect of capacity-building activities in developing countries in the area of debt management and debt sustainability;

34. Acknowledges that timely and comprehensive data on the level and composition of debt are necessary for, inter alia, building early warning systems aimed at limiting the impact of debt crises, calls for debtor and creditor countries to intensify their efforts to collect data, and calls for donors to consider increasing their support for technical cooperation programmes aimed at increasing the statistical capacity of developing countries in that regard;

35. Requests both creditor and borrower countries to incorporate debt sustainability considerations and greater transparency into their financing decisions and encourages consideration, as appropriate, of the Debt Sustainability Framework for Low-Income Countries, jointly developed by the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, and the Principles and Guidelines to Promote Sustainable Lending Practices in the Provision of Official Export Credits to Low Income Countries of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development as strategies for guiding financing policies, recognizing that both creditors and debtors have a shared interest and responsibility in promoting debt sustainability and sustainable financing;

36. Calls upon all Member States and the United Nations system to take appropriate measures and actions for the implementation of the commitments, agreements and decisions of the major United Nations conferences and summits, in particular those related to the question of the external debt sustainability of developing countries;

37. Encourages giving appropriate consideration to the issue of external debt sustainability in the elaboration of the post-2015 development agenda;

38. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session a report, prepared in consultation with relevant stakeholders, on the implementation of the present resolution and to include in the report a comprehensive and substantive analysis of the external debt situation of developing countries, and options for enhanced approaches to debt restructuring and resolution mechanisms that take into account the multiple dimensions of debt sustainability;

39. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-ninth session, under the item entitled “Macroeconomic policy questions”, the sub-item entitled “External debt sustainability and development”.
