Summary by the President of the Economic and Social Council of the special high-level meeting of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions, the World Trade Organization and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (New York, 16 April 2007)

Corrigendum

Paragraph 44 should read

44. Several representatives proposed that the experience gained through pilot schemes of innovative sources of finance be scaled up. In the view of some representatives, other options also deserved attention, such as the following: the Philippines had experienced positive results with debt equity swaps, a scheme which had been endorsed in a recent Association of Southeast Asian Nations summit and deserved further study by the United Nations; Spain had recommended the enhancement of the impact of remittances as a development tool, while working together with the private sector to reduce the costs of transfers, and consideration of high-level national dialogue in recipient countries on this issue; and the proposed Costa Rica consensus was geared to mobilize additional ODA support for low-income and middle-income countries that increased social spending by cutting military expenditures.
