“12. Recalls that sustainable debt financing can be an important element for mobilizing resources for development, reaffirms the role of debt relief in reducing debt and debt servicing as a tool for both crisis prevention and long-term debt sustainability, and underlines the urgent need to examine mechanisms for debt restructuring, including through a debt workout mechanism at the United Nations level;

“15. Stresses the importance of and the critical role that can be played by a universal, rule-based, open, non-discriminatory and equitable multilateral trading system in stimulating economic growth and development, in particular in the case of the developing countries, where trade continues to be one of the most important sources of development financing;

2. Stresses that each country has primary responsibility for its own economic and social development, and that the role of national policies, domestic resources and development strategies cannot be overemphasized, and reaffirms the importance of:

7. Notes that, while foreign direct investment is a major source of financing for development, the flow of such funds to developing countries and countries with economies in transition has fallen rapidly during the crisis and remains uneven, and, in this regard, calls upon developed countries to continue to devise source-country measures to encourage and facilitate the flow of foreign direct investment, inter alia, through the provision of export credits and other lending instruments, risk guarantees and business development services; calls upon developing countries and countries with economies in transition to continue their efforts to create a conducive domestic environment for attracting investments by, inter alia, achieving a transparent, stable and predictable investment climate with proper contract enforcement and respect for property rights; and stresses the importance of enhancing efforts to mobilize investment from all sources in human resources and physical, environmental, institutional and social infrastructure;
