Annex to the letter dated 27 May 2011 from the Permanent Representative of Switzerland to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

Global Governance Group input on the interaction between the Group of 20 and international organizations

The Global Governance Group (3G) notes the increasingly important role of international organizations, within and outside the United Nations system, in carrying out mandates and studies on behalf of the Group of 20 (G-20) for the preparation of G-20 summits. The International organizations that support the G-20 process with the provision of technical expertise include the Financial Action Task Force, the Financial Stability Board, the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and regional development banks, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development and the International Energy Agency, as well as entities of the United Nations system such as the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Labour Organization, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime.

At the outset, the 3G would like to recall its position stated in its paper on “Strengthening the Framework for G-20 Engagement of Non-members”, which was issued as a document of the General Assembly (A/64/706, annex). The United Nations is the only global body with universal participation and unquestioned legitimacy. G-20 processes should recognize and reflect this reality. The G-20 and its actions and decisions should thus complement and strengthen the United Nations system.

Given the growing agenda of the G-20, the working relationship between the G-20 and international organizations could increase in quantity and intensify in scope. In an effort to make such interactions between the G-20 and international organizations more transparent and in order to strengthen the formal governance arrangements already in place, the 3G would like to make the following recommendations:

- If international organizations are asked to carry out mandates of the G-20, such mandates should be referred, after the relevant G-20 summits, to the organizations’ formal decision-making processes for appropriate consideration and decision. It is also important that the G-20 look into whether the necessary funding is provided for the accomplishment of these mandates and avoid cross-subsidization by core resources. If there is a shortfall in funding, the respective governing bodies should decide on the next steps.
- Governing bodies of international organizations and the broader membership should receive regular briefings by their secretariats on the status of implementation of G-20-related mandates.
- Studies carried out by international organizations on behalf of the G-20 should be made available to all Member States. If appropriate, the findings should be discussed with Member States in a timely manner.

- Decisions relating to governance, strategies, management and financing of international organizations should be made in the respective governing bodies of the organizations in question.

The 3G believes that implementing these recommendations will promote transparency and inclusiveness vis-à-vis the actions taken by the G-20 and contribute to strengthening global governance. It could also help avoid the creation of an informal governance structure in relation to these international organizations.
