outcome document of the Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development to Review the Implementation of the Monterrey Consensus and the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, entitled 'Keeping the promise: united to achieve the Millennium Development Goals';

“6. Expresses deep concern about the ongoing adverse impacts of the global financial and economic crisis on development, including on the capacity of developing countries to mobilize resources for development, recognizes that there is a need to promote the recovery, and acknowledges that an effective response to the impacts of the crisis requires timely implementation of all development commitments, including existing aid commitments;

“7. Emphasizes that the financial and economic crisis has demonstrated the need for more effective government involvement so as to ensure an appropriate balance between the market and the public interest, and recognizes the need to better regulate financial markets;

“9. Urges developed countries that have not yet done so to meet the target of 0.7 per cent of gross national product for official development assistance; including 0.15 per cent to 0.2 per cent of gross national product for official development assistance to least developed countries, and considers that, in order to meet agreed commitments and targets, it is important that developed countries establish clear and transparent timetables within their national budget allocation processes to reach the level of at least 0.5 per cent of gross national product for official development assistance, as urgently as possible, taking into account that the 2010 deadline was not fulfilled, and 0.7 per cent by 2015, at the latest;

“10. Reaffirms the need for new and additional resources, inter alia, short-term liquidity and long-term development financing and grants, to be made available to developing countries to be utilized towards an adequate response to the adverse effects of the financial and economic crisis, in line with their development priorities, and in that regard urges developed countries to dedicate a percentage of their stimulus packages to provide additional financial assistance to developing countries;

“11. Underlines that aid flows to all developing countries should be more effective, sustainable, predictable, accountable, concessional and conditionality-free, in particular aid flows to the most vulnerable and least developed countries, as well as those to adequately support the efforts of middle-income countries and low-income countries to tackle their specific development challenges;

“13. Considers that innovative mechanisms of financing should be voluntary and should aim to effectively mobilize resources that are stable and predictable, should complement and not be a substitute for traditional sources of financing, in particular official development assistance, and that such financing should be disbursed in accordance with the priorities of developing countries and should not unduly burden those countries;

“14. Takes note of the ongoing discussions on innovative mechanisms of financing for development, and decides to convene a meeting on innovative mechanisms of financing for development, during its sixty-sixth session with a view to addressing the findings and recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General on innovative mechanisms of financing for development, including key issues, inter alia, additionality, the fragmentation of disbursements, monitoring, reporting mechanisms, governance and the definition of innovative financing, as well as the concern that some of the resources raised through innovative financing are currently accounted for as official development assistance, and requests the Secretary-General to report on the meeting at the sixty-seventh session of the General Assembly;

“15. Recognizes the important role played by special drawing rights allocations in increasing global liquidity, and contributing to global stability, equity and economic resilience, and in this regard encourages a further examination to be undertaken urgently of the role of increased issuances of special drawing rights in the expansion of liquidity and the promotion of development;

“17. Emphasizes the great importance of a timely, effective, comprehensive and durable solution to the debt problems of developing countries, and in that regard recognizes that debt financing and relief can be an important source of capital for economic growth and development, including for middle-income countries whose debt levels put their sustainability at risk;

“18. Also emphasizes that debt sustainability is essential for underpinning growth, underlines the importance of debt sustainability and effective debt management for efforts to achieve national development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and acknowledges that sovereign debt crises tend to be costly and disruptive, including for employment and productive investments, and tend to be followed by cuts in public spending, including on health and education, that affect in particular the poor and vulnerable;

“19. Encourages developed countries to allocate new and additional resources to assist developing countries in coping with the consequences of the crisis, including through concessional and grant-based financing, debt relief and debt restructuring, agreements between debtors and creditors on temporary debt standstills, and enhanced technical assistance and capacity-building in debt management, debt negotiation and renegotiation, in order to achieve and maintain debt sustainability;

“20. Notes that foreign direct investment is a major source of financing for development, and in this regard calls upon developed countries to continue to devise source-country measures to encourage and facilitate the flow of foreign direct investment, inter alia, through the provision of export credits and other lending instruments, risk guarantees and business development services;

“21. Reaffirms that international trade is an engine for development and sustained economic growth, and also reaffirms the critical role that a universal, rules-based, open, non-discriminatory and equitable multilateral trading system, as well as meaningful trade liberalization, can play in stimulating economic growth and development worldwide, thereby benefiting all countries at all stages of development;

“22. Stresses the need to resist all protectionist measures and tendencies, particularly by developed countries, that are affecting developing countries, including tariff, non-tariff and other barriers to trade, in particular agricultural subsidies, and to rectify any such measures already taken, recognizing the right for developing countries to fully utilize their policy space consistent with World Trade Organization commitments, and calls upon the World Trade Organization and other relevant bodies, including the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, to continue monitoring protectionist measures and to assess their impact on developing countries;

“23. Underlines that the ongoing global financial and economic crisis has further highlighted the urgent need for a substantive and comprehensive reform of the international economic and financial system and architecture to address their democratic deficit by further enhancing the voice and participation of developing countries, including with regard to policies, mandates, scope and governance, not only to better enable them to respond to and prevent financial and economic emergencies, but also to effectively promote development and equitably serve the needs of all Member States, particularly developing countries;

“24. Stresses that international financial institutions, in particular, must have a clear development orientation, and calls upon all Member States to participate in an open, inclusive and transparent dialogue on a new international economic and financial system and architecture;

“25. Recognizes the importance of equity and transparency in the international financial, monitoring and trading systems, and of the full and effective participation of developing countries in global decision-making and norm-setting;

“26. Stresses that the crisis has also underlined the need to address major failures such as the lack of proper regulation, supervision and monitoring of the financial sector and the lack of early warning mechanisms, as well as the asymmetry between developing and developed countries in their abilities to derive economic benefits from the global economy;

“27. Underlines the important role of the United Nations development system in advancing development and in protecting development gains in accordance with national strategies and priorities, including progress towards achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, threatened by the ongoing economic crisis;

“28. Reiterates the invitation to the regional economic commissions to continue producing technical advice and analysis, including recommendations on global financial, economic and systemic issues, to be made available to Member States, which will contribute to the follow-up of the mandates of the major conferences on finance and development;

“30. Invites the President of the General Assembly to initiate consultations with Member States during the sixty-sixth session of the Assembly, with a view to holding the review conference on financing for development in 2013;

“31. Reiterates its appeal to Member States and other potential donors to consider contributing generously to the Trust Fund for the Follow-up to the International Conference on Financing for Development, which would facilitate a strengthened and more effective intergovernmental inclusive process to carry out the financing for development follow-up;

“32. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled ‘Follow-up to and implementation of the outcome of the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development and the 2008 Review Conference’, and requests the Secretary-General to submit, under that item, an annual analytical assessment of the status of implementation of the Monterrey Consensus and the Doha Declaration on Financing for Development, and of the present resolution, which is to be prepared in full collaboration with the major institutional stakeholders, and to include concrete proposals on the further strengthening of the financing for development follow-up process for consideration by Member States.”
