Financing for Sustainable Development Office, United Nations, New York.

Dear colleagues.

On the specific question of what are some of the specific problems that could be addressed by a United Nations Framework Convention on international tax cooperation?

We allow ourselves to give our opinion and recommendations in this regard.

1. Procedural elements

These must include three basic elements for their realization, which are subject, object and activity.

Which allows us to specify that a United Nations Framework Convention on International Tax Cooperation must clearly define the elements described, understanding the participating countries as the first interested parties with a common objective that is the strengthening of international cooperation under a transparent process. and democratic in decision-making, allowing interested parties close collaboration for the exchange of information, defining as part of the activity some goals already contemplated in Goal 16 of Sustainable Development.

Substantive Elements.

2. It is important to define specific and priority issues in the global context, with specific points ranging from the sanitation of public finances, expansion of tax collection, the design of public policies for programming and budgeting, loan management, the renegotiation of public debt, etc.

In addition to stipulating whether the resolutions or agreements will be legally binding for the participating countries.

Issuing the corresponding information through official and mass media channels, without forgetting the operational protocols and manuals to consolidate an alliance in international collaboration based on Sustainable Development Goal 17.

Without anything else in particular, we appreciate your attention to this.

Kind regards.

Juan Francisco Martínez Ortiz. President of Corporate Governance.
